

Here's the one Peace Corps book every library should have!

A wide audience will want to read this classic memoir of service during the Kennedy years to discover what the Peace Corps is all about.

150,000 people request information about Peace Corps service
each year

155,000 Americans have served as volunteers
in 134 countries

7,000 volunteers
currently serve in 77 countries

“Scanlon the letter-writer had reportorial skills. He was a peace, not a war, correspondent, sending back dispatches from places in southern Chile that few outsiders had ever penetrated...Hundreds of books have been written by former [Peace Corps] volunteers...Tom Scanlon's is among the finest.”

—The Washington Post Book World

Published by Posterity Press. Available for $14.95.
For further information, contact Benchmarks at 202-965-3983
or e-mail: bnchmrks@aol.com

Waiting for the Snow:
The Peace Corps Papers of a Charter Volunteer

— By Tom Scanlon —

Waiting for the Snow* reminds us of the enormous greatness that can happen when ordinary people do what is right and good. This is a great read, for the serious student of international affairs and for the dreamer, the lover of a gentle story about the humanity of humankind.

—Sargent Shriver Founding Peace Corps Director

Recently I heard a story of a young Peace Corpsman named Tom Scanlon who is working in Chile.... Well, I hope [his] spirit motivates all of you.

—President John F. Kennedy 1962 speech to college student interns in Washington, DC

I distinctly remember JFK telling Scanlon's story all those years ago, and his excellent book reawakens the bright hopes I also felt when I joined the Peace Corps. This is a salutory story.

—Paul Theroux, Author
*Mosquito Coast and The Great Railway Bazaar

[Scanlon's letters]...provide a glimpse of a more innocent time when it seemed possible that the world could be made a better place with just good will and good works.... The sense of personal innocence, now long lost by America and Americans, is disarming.

—The Boston Globe

To order, contact Benchmarks in Washington, DC at 202-965-3983 or e-mail at bnchmrks@aol.com